

It seems our week of adventures is drawing to a close, so we are making sure we make the most of it. We had a fun filled day, with two groups joining for the ice cold gorge walk and canoe trip, whilst the others enjoyed some paddleboarding and via ferrata.

Mr Marks and Mr Cole's groups had the same activities today, starting off with canoeing. The children worked hard as a team to get to the meeting point where they melted marshmallows over a fire and had some lunch, before rowing back. They then met at the foot of the gorge for a big group walk up, resulting in some very cold, yet very happy, children.

Meanwhile, Mr Carey's group started off the day with Via ferrata, pulling themselves across a flowing river and breezing through the more advanced course with no difficulty. We then made our way to the lake for paddle boarding, where the children went from sitting, to crouching, to standing. By the end of the day they were flying across the water, and very happily pushing each other into the lake.

Once everyone had returned, we washed and returned our walking boots, cleaned ourselves up, and enjoyed sausages and mash for dinner. We then shared some happy stories around the campfire, had a lego building competition, crafted a makeshift catwalk for some dramatic strutting, before having hot chocolate and heading to bed.

I made sure to capture some quotes from the children below about their favourite parts of their days.

My favourite part of today was when we made a fire and gathered around to eat some marshmallows for lunch.

My favourite part of the day was when we landed the boats because the other group got stuck and we had to wade in the lake to pull them onto shore.

My favourite part of the day was gliding across the water when we were paddleboarding. I felt a lot more confident at the end of the day!
